

Here is an inline highlight that lives inside the line of text, so the words keep flowing on either side of it and the line does not break around it.

A block, by contrast, takes its own horizontal band of the page. This one carries a fill, a stroke, rounded corners, and inner padding — the same knobs a box has, just stacked vertically instead of inline.

With a fixed height and `clip: true`, anything that overruns the box is