

The HTML spec was first drafted in 1991, the CSS one in 1996, and a modern JSON API returns data over HTTP long after both. All-caps acronyms drop to small caps and years pick up a warm accent — without editing a single acronym by hand.