

Symbols and escapes

Two hyphens make an en dash for ranges: pages 12–18.

Three make an em dash for a break in thought—like this one. Three dots become a proper ellipsis... see?

A non-breaking space keeps a value glued to its unit:

10 kg.

To print a literal special character, escape it with a backslash: `not strong`, a real `#` hash, and an `_underscore_`.

And any character by codepoint with a Unicode escape:

✓ done, → onward.
